Jasiński generally works with oil painting, but his portfolio also includes pencil drawings and graphic prints. The artist's work is characteristic for its wide color range and various body deformations of the represented figures. Jasiński art is what we call figurative art – his main sources of inspiration are the human anatomy, and the human itself. In his creative process, he reaches into mythology, eroticism and pop culture motifs. The figures represented in his art works appear in different forms - from classical portraits to complex arrangements, showing the whole body.

Jasiński's works burst with color and vitality. They are full of bold and impactful contrasts. The painter is a skilled colorist - he chooses colors with sensitivity and consideration, the combinations of which are even mesmerizing. The artist also uses colors to build up the form and give it weight. His style combines the lightness of multicolored compositions with the sculptural nature of the body.

The artist admits that he is not a fan of looking for a “second bottom” in painting. For him, art is primarily an expression of his personality. When creating, he reaches out to his own experiences and emotions, and paintings become a record of what flows from his heart. Jasiński is not in the habit of planning his next canvas - each work is created as a result of the artist's instinctive impulse. “Each painting is a few dozen hours from my life, my joys and my moods” - Jasiński says.

When speaking of Dominik Jasiński, we cannot dismiss his drawings. Although at first glance the painter's canvases are most strongly influenced by vivid color, the basis for his compositions is a reliably executed drawing. The artist shapes the complex structure of the human body with careful, flowing lines, which perfectly combine with the painterly character of his works.
